Fucina di Vulcano

A charming resort overlooking the highest active volcano in Europe, Mount Etna...

Fucina di Vulcano is a breathtaking hotel located on the northwest side of Mongibello, in Bronte: the town of pistachios. As you wind through the streets, you'll feel the Mediterranean air and see the colours that characterise this stunning locus. The picturesque village of Bronte is worth adventuring in, with its blend of historical sites and legends. Whilst touring, you'll learn that Bronte is famous worldwide for its "green gold", the pistachios, which were planted in ancient times in the fertile and volcanic Sicilian soil.

The Resort

The setting is steeped in incredible myth and tradition, and amidst it all, Fucina di Vulcano is a breath of fresh air with its contemporary atmosphere. The name "Fucina di Vulcano" comes from Greek mythology; what in the myth was a workshop where the Cyclops Bronte forged steel, today becomes the place where guests can enjoy genuine hospitality and a unique culinary journey. And, all of this is possible thanks to the determination of the owner, Irene Foti, and her staff.

Boasting nine rooms, a charming restaurant with an astonishing view of Mount Etna, a large reception hall, and a vast garden, the resort is exactly what couples need to make their wedding a showstopper. The exterior is peaceful and bucolic, the perfect location to host a romantic ceremony. And, the delicacies offered by the restaurant will blow away your guests. Following the Sicilian tradition by using local ingredients and authentic flavours, Chef Sandro Rinaldo presents a culinary adventure that will awaken all of your senses. Not only that, but the chef's modern inspiration brings novelty and refinement to the ancient recipes of Bronte and those of Sicily. The food and wine proposals are a real highlight of the experience at Fucina di Vulcano.

Weddings

Fucina di Vulcano is located in a natural setting of rare beauty, between the Nebrodi National Park and the Etna Regional Park, making it an ideal venue for luxurious weddings and events. An enchanted ambiance, a fiery Sicilian character, culinary art, and a profound love for the land, are just a few of the reasons why you'll love getting hitched here. It is the perfect year-round countryside getaway for you and your dearest ones. Fucina di Vulcano is licensed for civil ceremonies so you can plan your entire day or weekend around the venue. As the sun melts away, you can exchange your promises with Mount Etna framing your celebration. After the ceremony, you can seal your idyllic union by enjoying their lavish banquet, an experience you'll remember forever.
